Preface

In the Spring of 1998, at the request of the Orchestra Division of the South Carolina Music Educators Association, a committee was formed to establish grading criteria and to review string orchestra music for possible inclusion in a recommended list for orchestra directors in South Carolina. Such a list became necessary as changes were being made to the state's Concert Festival, including the addition of sight-reading.

Hundreds of string orchestra music titles were reviewed in preparing this list. Many titles were played by South Carolina orchestra directors in the ASTA/NSOA reading sessions held each fall. Music performed in the South Carolina Concert Festivals was also evaluated, and published lists from Virginia, Michigan, Ohio and Texas served as models for the South Carolina list. The resulting compilation differs from some lists:

1. This list uses a system of six grade levels rather than five grade levels or a grading system based on school size. Six grade levels are used for the ASTA with NSOA list, as well as the state lists for Georgia, Maryland, New York, Pennsylvania, Virginia and West Virginia.
2. Six grade levels allows for maximum flexibility and consistency in grading. Of course not all directors will agree on the grade levels assigned to various pieces. This is reflected in the fact that titles appear in different grade levels on different state lists. Such titles generally appear in this list at the highest grade level for which they were listed in another state. The grade level criteria used in this list are outlined in the String Orchestra Super List, edited by Frederick R. Mayer, and published by the Music Educators National Conference.

A system based on school size appears to lend credence to the false concept that a large school necessarily has a large, advanced orchestra, while a small school has a small, less-advanced orchestra. With so many growing orchestras from schools of every size in South Carolina, it was decided that each school should be allowed to enter the Concert Festival at an appropriate level of the director's choice, regardless of school size.

3. This list does not include out-of-print titles unless those titles are of such significant educational and intrinsic musical value that directors would want to procure archival copies. Out-of-print titles are noted with (†).
4. Publisher information is not abbreviated beyond recognition. This makes the list user-friendly for new directors as well as veteran directors by making it unnecessary to turn to an appendix to determine the publisher for a particular title.

It is hoped that this list of over 700 titles of string orchestra music will serve as a valuable reference tool for directors in the state. This list will be updated annually and posted on the Orchestra Division website.

A special thank you is due to those on the committee for giving of their time and expertise. Their names and positions are acknowledged on the cover. On behalf of the Orchestra Division I would also like to thank Matt Spieker, formerly orchestra coordinator in Spartanburg, District Five, now a director in Colorado, for his invaluable help planning the reorganization of the state's Concert Festival.
